Fundamentals of Industrial Hygiene

(FIH) is designed to develop a basic understanding of Industrial Hygiene terminology and principles. Through lecture, workshops, case study and equipment demonstrations, participants build their ability to address workplace health issues.

Learning Objectives

Upon completing this course, participants will be able to:

- Recognize the basic anatomy and physiology associated with the routes of entry and toxicology
- Recognize chemical, physical, ergonomics, and biological hazards
- Use basic chemical and physical hazard evaluation techniques
- Conduct an industrial hygiene walk through survey
- Recognize general engineering and administrative controls

The Advanced Safety Certificate

(ASC) is the National Safety Council's program for the development of safety professionals. Those who earn it can be justifiably proud of their accomplishments. It places them a cut above others in the field and tells their top management that they are better able to develop and implement an effective safety and health program. The ASC targets skills that increase compliance with regulatory standards, improve productivity and enhance employee participation in the safety and health process. Those who earn the ASC are better able to provide other employees with training needed to make a safety and health program work, and fulfill their responsibilities as part of management.
